Abstrak

Village as "self governing Society: has to be existed as local government community with its uniqueness based on its origin and customs and traditions. As a community based on customs and traditions with its traditional characteristic, institutions which are at village cannot able to move dynamically in order to push the village to be more modern and self sustainable. The village is in a dilemmatic position between demand of a dynamic change of government and its traditional position. In one hand there are pressure and demand so that the village possess accelaration's ability and responsive to the demand of government change to be more modern and self sustainable, in other hand the village is a enslaved by its own disability, both in human and financial resources aspect, in order to response those demand and dynamic change. Finally the village in thta static condition is disposed to be left behind in every change. By strengthening the institutions which are in the village, it can be expected that the static condition can be changed toward a more dynamic ad self sustainable movement without leaving behind the especial characteristic of the village as traditional community with its own origin.
