Abstrak

The adoption of the Millennium Development Goals (MDG) in the Millennium Summit in 2000 by all 189 member of the UN General Assembly was a defining moment for global cooperation in the 21st century. The MDG is global framework to face the challenges regarding human resources development in the world. In the Indonesian contest, the question is "do targets and indicators contained in MDG have accorded with domestic values?". The question is relevant because the MDG will never be achieved if the MDG does not accommodate local values. Localization of the MDG is very important to synchronize the MDG and country development; hence the localization of the MDG must be first step to take in achieving MDG for each country. Refer to the recent condition in Indonesia, there are several problems in achieving MDG targets such as (i) quality of [human resources, (ii) infrastructure, (iii) implementation of the decentralization, (iv) slow economy recovery, (v) low enforcement, and (vi) existence of several conflict regions. Based on those conditions, achieving the targets and indicators of MDG in Indonesia is not easy. Collective effort involving international community like donors and national community like civil society business/private sector and Universities is a must.
