ABSTRACT

Middle age is the time when aging begins. Physical change, as an effect of aging, in women is valued more negatively than in men because of social standard which appraises women mostly based on their appearance. Such standard could influence body image and cause aging anxiety in the middle aged women. This research was conducted to find the correlation between body image and aging anxiety in middle aged women. The participants in this research were 67 women who aged between 40-65 years old, residing in Jabodetabek. The statistic test result reveals that there was a significant correlation between body image and aging anxiety ($r = -,365$, $p < ,05$, two-tailed).
