Abstrak

Tesis ini akan membahas gerakan sosial (/shakai und) yang dilakukan masyarakat Okinawa terkait keberadaan pangkalan militer Amerika Serikat yang ada di Okinawa. Penelitian akan menggunakan metode deskriptif kualitatif, dengan dukungan data kuantitatif. Gerakan masyarakat Okinawa yang sudah dilakukan sejak pangkalan militer A.S. dibangun di sana tersebut memiliki tuntutan yang senantiasa bergeser. Namun tuntutan utamanya adalah memindahkan seluruh pangkalan militer A.S. ke luar Okinawa. Tuntutan ini menjadi sesuatu yang rumit karena keberadaan pangkalan militer A.S. memberi keuntungan sekaligus menimbulkan kerugian, sehingga selalu memicu pro dan kontra. Analisis lebih banyak dilakukan setelah tahun 2006, yaitu setelah pemerintah Jepang dan A.S. menyepakati pemindahan pangkalan militer yang dianggap paling berbahaya bagi penduduk sekitar di kota Ginowan.

This thesis will discuss social movements (/shakai und) by Okinawans related to the existence of the United States Military Bases in Okinawa. This research will use qualitative descriptive method, with quantitative data to support it. Okinawans' movement that has been carried out since the U.S. bases were constructed for the first time there has ever-shifting demands. However, the main demand has been ruling out the whole U.S. bases outside of Okinawa. This demand has been complex because the bases give advantages and disadvantages at the same time, always triggering pros and cons. The analysis in this thesis is mostly carried out after 2006, in other words at the time when Japan and the U.S. governments agreed to move part of a base which is considered dangerous for residents around Ginowan city.
