This thesis mainly discusses two problems: the urgency of giving the jurisdiction for constitutional court of Republic of Indonesia over constitutional complaint; and how the jurisdiction is supposedly given. This thesis concludes that: constitutional court should have jurisdiction over constitutional complaint in order to implement the principles of ‘rule of law’, protect human rights, uphold the supremacy of constitution, maintain checks and balances function, fulfill the essence of establishing constitutional court, and completely implement the function of constitutional review, and empirically there has been many cases in constitutional court of Republic of Indonesia that contain constitutional complaint substance; and the only way to give the jurisdiction to constitutional court of Republic of Indonesia is to amend the constitution.
