ABSTRAK

Skripsi ini membahas tentang konflik, proses negosiasi dan konsensus dalam pengambilan keputusan di keluarga commuter marriage yang dilihat dari sudut pandang pihak commuter. Penelitian ini menggunakan metode kualitatif dengan mewawancarai empat orang informan yang terdiri dari dua orang commuter husband dan dua orang commuter wife. Kriteria informan yang dipilih adalah mereka yang telah menjalani commuter marriage minimal dua tahun, memiliki minimal satu anak, dan periode waktu pulang ke rumah minimal dua kali dalam seminggu. Hasil temuan menunjukkan bahwa terdapat dua jenis pengambilan keputusan di keluarga commuter marriage, yaitu pengambilan keputusan ketika pelaku commuter berada di rumah dan tidak berada di rumah. Konflik, proses negosiasi dan konsensus dalam pengambilan keputusan di keluarga commuter marriage dipengaruhi oleh struktur sosial dan struktur situasional keluarga.

ABSTRACT This study discusses conflict, negotiation process and consensus in decision making within commuter marriage couples from commuters's point of views.

This study is carried out using qualitative method by interviewing four informants consists of two commuter husbands and two commuter wives. The informants are chosen based on their experiences on having commuter marriage for as long as a minimum of two years, having at least one child and with the period of commuting at least twice a week. This study shows that there are two types of decision making in commuter marriage families, decision making happens when commuters are at home and when commuters aren't at home. Conflict, negotiation process and consensus in decision making are influenced by social structure and situational structure within the families.
