Abstrak

The university is an important part of the triple helix model of regional and national innovation systems. University as a center of science and technology (center of excellent) has a strategic position in creating a knowledge-based society, and the transformation to modern civilization. University with all faults must be synergies with industry and government, so as to generate new innovations, and creating a development strategy that guided the university to meet the challenges of development in various fields. Universities as actors in the innovation syste must be supported by the ability of qualified human resources and adequate financing. Therefore every human being must develop a culture of academic research in order to increase the capacity of science and technology.
