ABSTRAK

Penelitian ini bertujuan untuk melihat pengaruh self-esteem dan job search self-efficacy terhadap perilaku pencarian kerja pada sarjana baru. Sebanyak 346 responden mengisi kuesioner alat ukur self-esteem (Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale), job search self-efficacy (Job Search Self-Efficacy-Behavior) dan perilaku pencarian kerja (Job Search Behavior Scale). Pada penelitian ini, hasil penelitian menunjukkan bahwa self-esteem ($= 0,194$, $p = 0,000$) dan job search self-efficacy ($= 0,499$; $p = 0,000$) memiliki pengaruh positif terhadap perilaku pencarian kerja pada sarjana baru. Lebih lanjut diketahui bahwa variabel job search self-efficacy memiliki kontribusi varian yang unik pada perilaku pencarian kerja pada sarjana baru setelah mengontrol self-esteem.

ABSTRAK
The aim of this research is to examine the influence of self-esteem and job search self-efficacy on job search behaviors among higher education fresh graduates. A total of 346 respondents completed a survey on self-esteem (Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale), job search self-efficacy (Job Search Self-Efficacy-Behavior), and job search behaviors (Job Search Behavior Scale) variables. Results indicated that both self-esteem ($= 0,194$, $p = 0,000$) and job search self-efficacy ($= 0,499$; $p = 0,000$) positively influenced job search behaviors among fresh graduates. Furthermore, job search self-efficacy explained an incremental variance in job search behaviors above and beyond self-esteem. Theoretical and practical implications are further discussed.
