The purpose of this research is to analyze the relationship between player's value, field performance, financial performance, and stock performance of European football clubs. The sample used in this research are 17 European football clubs which are listed in stock exchange. The method used to analyze the data is Generalized Structural Component Analysis (GSCA). The results show that player's value has positive impact on financial performance but its impact on field performance is insignificant. Then, field performance and financial performance has significant impact on each other. Last, both field performance and financial performance have insignificant impact on football club's stock performance.
