.....This thesis is focused on evaluating the implementation of the internal control system within the Secretariat of the Vice President based on Government Regulation No. 60 of 2008 regarding internal control systems of government. The method applied in this research is qualitative descriptive. Based on the results of qualitative descriptive analysis reinforced with questionnaires, it is concluded that generally the Secretariat of the Vice President has been implementing all elements of internal control system (SPIP). Strategies developed and applied by the secretariat in implementing SPIP have resulted in generally good performance, but not effective one yet.

The results of this study leave with some recommendations. First, the secretariat needs to improve its elements of risk assessment with comprehensive risk mapping by involving Development Finance Comptroller (BPKP) serving as umbrella organization for SPIP implementation. Second, it needs comprehensive communication within critical areas, particularly on risk mapping. Third, brainstorming on issues involved in the coordination among units in the secretariat is essential, particularly with respect to overlapping duties and functions. Fourth, the secretariat needs to evaluate its organizational structure. Fifth, it is vital for the secretariat to develop a transparent internal civil service's career development, especially on promotion and transfer. Sixth, a method to identify the secretariat's stakeholders should be developed. Seventh, a working system with high rewards for best performance should be developed. Eighth, there should be capacity building for Government Internal Oversight Body (APIP) officials held regularly to improve their understanding and performance in enforcing the implementation of SPIP in the secretariat
