Abstrak

We describe a case report of giant sialolith of Wharton's duct in a 46 years old man. This is an unusual presentation of a salivary calculus and to our knowledge such a huge salivary stone. The clinical symptoms and signs were somewhat typical and included acute suppurative cellulites in the floor. This kind of stone is very interesting because of its large size in this case of a surgical intervention by extra-oral extirpation of the presented sialolith.
