Abstrak

This paper is a report of a study on factors believed to be the major determinants on export Indonesia. It is found that foreign direct investment, gross domestic product, exchange rate, are important in explaining the rise and fall of Indonesia export using the error correction model . The macro economic data 1980 -2011 available from The Bank Indonesia (Central Bank of Indonesia), BPS (Central Statistic Agency) verify the above presumption. The result of the study, that FDI, GDP and S(IDR/USD) has impact to Indonesia export very significantly.
