Shoujo is a female character that is often found in contemporary Japanese anime. Its representations have developed throughout it years following the development of the Anime itself. The representation and depiction of shoujo characters started from its traditional femininity aspects to its female empowerment form as a heroine characters in anime. But, differing from the typical anime, Sen to Chihiro no Kamikakushi, an anime made by Hayao Miyazaki under the name of Studio Ghibli, has different representation of its shoujo characters. Chihiro had to go through an empowering process to change from being weak to being an empowered female.
