Abstrak

Procurement of public goods/services is a routine of government activity which has most prone to corruption, however with minimum control. It is essential to prioritize the agenda of governance reforms of procurement of public goods/services. Up to now, government has not yet found a proper formulation. Although the regulation outlining this subject is always updated. This paper attempts to examine some elements of the procurement of public goods/service as an alternative solution to improve the process of procurement of public goods/services in Indonesia. The most important reform is in the pre-procurement cycle (stages of planning). Planning on budget and procurement as well as aspects of integrity and accountability are elements that must be better conducted in the procurement of public goods/services in Indonesia
