Abstrak

I have used as my sources today to talk about the American perspective on the PRRI/Permesta rebellion two books that have come out fairly recently. One is Paul Gardner's book, Shared Hopes, Separate Fears: a history of 50 years of United States-Indonesia relations, which was published under the auspices of the United States-Indonesia, is here with us this morning. The other book is one done by my own professor at Cornell University, George Kahin, together with his wife, Audrey, which has the very catchy title of Subversion as foreign policy.
