

Identifikasi sektor-sektor potensial di kabupaten Bekasi

Ahmad Ridwan, author

Deskripsi Lengkap: <https://lib.ui.ac.id/detail?id=97026&lokasi=lokal>

Abstrak

Indonesia is the world's largest archipelago with a population of roughly 224 million (July 2000 estimate), making it the world's fourth most populous nation.

Indonesia people have different character and patient in community. We as a developing country, and it grows in entirely area from province to region.

The progressive growth in this decade which possibly have different perception of occurrence and the developing as the real obligation involved in each region, central government as decision maker of policy and planning

The different condition in each region, influences the pattern and the form of development to apply in each region. The policy which successfully applied in one region is not necessary as successful region to others. If we would develop one region, therefore the policy should suitable regard the region condition such as problems, needs and potential.

A thorough research to know the potential and the prospect of a certain district should be undertaken. The final result of the research has to be provided to the pertinent decision makers.

The district of Bekasi has to undertake similar research. As a strategic region located in the border of Jakarta, Bekasi with its excellent infrastructure and transportation could be further developed as an advanced and integrated industrial business district.

Recently, there are five industrial business district in the region and of course there will be more in line with further development. All of these potentials which must be better studied and research. Further, the research also tries to answer several aspects of Bekasi region development, and views on which sectors need to be better developed and handle seriously. Eventually, the results of the research would be put as an indicator and tools of strategic decision making process.