Analisis kualitatif berupa wawancara mendalam juga dilakukan untuk mendukung temuan kuantitatif.

.....This study examines the impact of local politics on poverty alleviation and the provision of public goods in a village setting. Specifically, it focuses on the influence of Village Deliberation and BPD members, who represent rural communities. The analysis employs quantitative methods, utilizing 2018 Village Potential data and employing ordinary least square and logit binary regression models. The results indicate a positive and significant relationship between Village Deliberation, BPD members, and poverty alleviation at the national level. Furthermore, Village Deliberation and BPD members demonstrate a positive and significant association with the likelihood of providing public goods within the village. Additionally, the education level of village heads is found to affect both poverty alleviation and the provision of public goods. To supplement the quantitative findings, qualitative analysis in the form of in-depth interviews was conducted. These interviews aimed to provide further support and insights into the study's results.
